

Table of contents

List of abbreviations — vii

Introduction — 1

I Typological aspects

Silvia Luraghi and Seppo Kittilä

1 Typology and diachrony of partitive case markers — 17

Matti Miestamo

2 Partitives and negation: a cross-linguistic survey — 63

II Uralic languages

Anne Tamm

3 The partitive concept versus linguistic partitives: from abstract concepts to evidentiality in the Uralic languages — 89

Tuomas Huomo and Liina Lindström

4 Partitives across constructions: on the range of uses of the Finnish and Estonian “partitive subjects” — 153

Helena Metslang

5 Partitive noun phrases in the Estonian core argument system — 177

M. M. Jocelyne Fernandez-Vest

6 Finnish Partitive and resultativity in translation(s): a discourse-cognitive approach — 257

III Basque

Urtzi Etxeberria

7 The definite article and the partitive particle in Basque: dialectal variation — 291

Borja Ariztimuño López

8 The origin of the Basque partitive — 323

IV Slavic languages

Michael Daniel

9 The second genitive in Russian — 347

Katia Paykin

10 The Russian partitive and verbal aspect — 379

Elżbieta Tabakowska

11 Double government in Polish: a case study — 399

V Historical perspectives on Indo-European languages

Eystein Dahl

12 Partitive Subjects and Objects in Indo-Iranian and beyond — 417

Luz Conti and Silvia Luraghi

13 The Ancient Greek partitive genitive in typological perspective — 443

Anne Carlier and Béatrice Lamiroy

14 The grammaticalization of the prepositional partitive in Romance — 477

VI Oceanic languages

Peter Budd

15 Partitives in Oceanic languages — 523

Subject index — 563

Author index — 567