

Contents

Acknowledgements — v

List of figures — x

List of tables — xiii

1 Introduction — 1

- 1.1 Speaker choice, ditransitives, and the sociolinguistic variable — 1
- 1.2 The scope of ditransitives — 7
- 1.3 The corpora — 13
 - 1.3.1 Freiburg English Dialect Corpus (FRED) — 13
 - 1.3.2 BNCweb – The online edition of the British National Corpus (Lancaster platform) — 14
 - 1.3.3 Written data: LOB and F-LOB — 16
- 1.4 Brief overview of the chapters — 17

2 The ditransitive construction: previous studies — 19

- 2.1 Introduction — 19
- 2.2 Language-internal constraints on the dative alternation pertaining to the verb — 20
 - 2.2.1 Semantic considerations — 20
 - 2.2.2 Phonological and morphological constraints — 37
- 2.3 Language-internal constraints on the dative alternation pertaining to the objects — 42
 - 2.3.1 Semantic considerations — 42
 - 2.3.2 Pragmatic constraints — 48
- 2.4 Idiomatic expressions as a starting point: is there an alternation? — 54
- 2.5 Overview of all the language-internal constraints on the dative alternation — 59
- 2.6 Language-external constraints on the dative alternation – some studies — 62
 - 2.6.1 Gradient language-internal constraints as characterisations of varieties — 62
 - 2.6.2 Dialectological descriptions of ditransitive phenomena — 64
 - 2.6.3 Two dialect corpus studies — 67
- 2.7 Conclusion — 69

3	Methodology: Defining the object(s) of study — 71
3.1	Introduction — 71
3.2	Finding ditransitive verbs — 72
3.3	Finding double objects — 76
3.3.1	The object category Pro — 81
3.3.2	The object category NP — 83
3.3.3	Intervening material — 86
3.4	Idiomatic expressions — 88
3.5	The regional classification — 89
3.6	Summary — 93
4	Spoken style, written style – ditransitives in speech and in the written standard — 94
4.1	Introduction — 94
4.2	The spoken data: FRED and the BNCreg — 95
4.2.1	Objects and object patterns in FRED and the BNCreg — 95
4.2.2	Ditransitive verbs in FRED and the BNCreg — 98
4.2.3	Diachronic analysis of the verb occurrence in FRED and the BNCreg — 103
4.2.4	The verb give — 107
4.3	The written data: LOB and F-LOB — 116
4.3.1	Objects and object patterns in LOB and F-LOB — 116
4.3.2	Ditransitive verbs in LOB and F-LOB — 118
4.4	Comparison of the written and spoken data sets — 123
4.4.1	Comparison of the object SETs — 123
4.4.2	Comparison of the verb encodings — 125
4.5	Conclusion — 130
5	Object patterns in dialects of English: a regional and historical analysis — 132
5.1	Introduction — 132
5.2	Historical development of the object patterns — 137
5.3	The most frequent pattern: SET A (She gave her a book) and its alternatives — 148
5.4	Second in frequency: SET D (She gave the woman a book) and its alternatives — 152
5.5	Marginal but instructive: SET C (She gave the woman it) and alternatives — 155
5.6	Conclusion — 163

6	"Give it me!" – Pronominal ditransitives in English dialects — 166
6.1	Introduction — 166
6.2	The regional dimension — 171
6.3	The diachronic dimension — 180
6.4	Other determining factors — 191
6.4.1	Imperative versus declarative — 191
6.4.2	Pronouns — 193
6.4.3	Verb types — 196
6.5	Summary — 198
7	Conclusion and outlook: ditransitives in British and American English dialects and beyond — 200
7.1	Recap: ditransitives in British English dialects — 200
7.2	Ditransitives in American English dialects — 203
7.3	Ditransitives in the languages of the world — 211
	Appendix — 216
	A: Levin's (1993) classes of verbs occurring only in PREP — 216
	B: Levin's (1993) classes of verbs occurring only in DOC — 217
	C: List of nouns taking sentential complements in FRED and the BNCreg — 217
	D: Light verb collocations with give in FRED and the BNCreg — 218
	List of data bases — 221
	Bibliography — 222
	Permissions — 232
	Index — 233