ORTHOGRAPHY

There are thirteen consonants. Ten are very similar to sounds in English:

b is like b or p in English

m is like m in English

w is like w in English

d is like d or t in English

n is like n in English

y is like y in English

g is like g or k in English

l is like l in English

ñ is like n and y pronounced simultaneously, like the sound in the middle of English onion

ŋ is like the 'ng' sound which occurs in English only at the end of a word, as in bang, or in the middle, as in singer, never at the beginning of a word

It is not hard to learn how to say ŋ at the beginning of a word, as in Dyirbal ŋa 'yes'.

EITHER put your tongue in the position to say g, but actually say n

OR say bang, add an -a at the end, banga, and then drop off the initial ba-, saying banga, banga, banga, nga, nga

Three consonants are a bit different:

j is like d and y (or t and y) pronounced at the same time; it is a sharper sound than English j, as in jelly (or ch, as in church)

r is like the r in Standard Australian English, but with the tongue tip pulled back a bit further

rr is like the rolled r in Scottish pronunciation of English

The Ngajan dialect has a single rhotic, written as R, which corresponds to both r and rr in other dialects.

There are just three vowels:

i as in English bit

a as in English bat

u as in English book

N and W dialects also have three long vowels:

ii as in English beat

aa as in English heart

uu as in English boot

Every vowel, in each syllable of a word, must be pronounced distinctly.

(Note that there is no e or o.)

Note that in earlier orthographies: j has been written as dy or d r as ɾ

ñ as ny or j ŋ as ng rr as r

Introduction

The typical way of presenting the lexical resources of a language is through an alphabetical list of words, called a 'dictionary'. But, organised in this way, words with similar or identical meaning are located far apart. For example, the very common verb 'return to point of origin, go home' (11O1) is banaga-y in AJG dialects, ɲurba-y in MUY and ɲuuba-y in NW, words which would be placed far apart in a conventional dictionary. Similarly for verbs describing different types of visual behaviour, such as bura-l 'see, look at, watch', waba-l 'look up at', barrmi-l 'look back at', and walgi-y 'look round some object at' (43A).

The Dyirbal lexicon is presented in the form of a 'thesaurus', where words with a similar meaning are grouped together. In the case of Dyirbal this is particularly important since the Jalnguy (Ja) avoidance style ('mother-in-law language') typically has one word corresponding to a set of words in the Everyday (Ev) style (which was called Ngirrma in NWM and Guwal in JG). For instance, the four Ev verbs for types of visual attention, at the end of the preceding paragraph, are all rendered by ñurimaz -l in Ja.

The thesaurus enables the user to find a word according to its meaning. There is also need for a way to find the meaning of a given word, for both the E and Ja styles. This was achieved for Ev lexemes by Supplement (d) to my previous book A New Grammar of Dyirbal, and can be accessed at www.oup.co.uk/companion/Dyirbal.

The Ja vocabulary is dealt with in the present document. It consists of every Ja lexeme from the Nominal (and Time Words) and Verbal thesauruses in Data Base 1, arranged alphabetically. Not listed here are fully grammatical words—pronouns, noun markers, verb markers, demonstratives, etc.—and proper nouns (whether of people or places) which are the same in Ev and Ja.

There are always exception, and here we find four grammatical words which do have separate form in Ja. These comprise three of the 18 particles, and the negative response word 'no, nothing':

	Ev	Ja
'inappropriate'	waRa in N, warra in M	warranda in M, waRanda in N
'can't be helped'	mugu in NM	buba in N, mumba in M
'in turn'	ɲuRi in N, ɲurri in M	ɲuRñji in N, ɲurrñji in M
'no, nothing'	yimba in NM	gamañjal in NM

This vocabulary is organised in six columns.

Column 1. Lexical root forms in the Jalnguy style. Some compound stems are included. Note that in many cases the meaning of the compound is not inferable from the meanings of the component words. Sometimes a compound in Ev is replicated exactly in Ja. For example, the Ev verb munu-mada-l 'say one doesn't want something' is made up noun munu 'anus' and verb mada-l 'throw' (literally, 'throw arse'):

	Ev	Ja
noun	munu	gumba	'anus'
verb	mada-l	nayŋu-l	'throw'
compound verb	munu-mada-l	gumbu-nayŋu-l	'say one doesn't want something'

One of the most intriguing compound is that which the M dialect has for the Ja of the very common Ev verb ŋamba-l 'listen to, hear, hear about, understand. believe, think about'. This is digirr-julbamba-l, literally 'put down temple (side of head)'; (Perhaps it relates to a Dyirbal supposition about the nature of hearing.) In contrast, the J dialect has a standard Ja verb ŋarrmi-l for Ev ŋamba-l. Thus:

		Ev in J & M	Ja in J	Ja in M
noun	'temple	yagin	yadin	digirr
verb	'put down'	yuba-y	julbamba-l	julbamba-l
verb	'hear, listen'	ŋamba-l	ŋarrmi-l	digirr-julbamba-l

Verbs are divided into two conjugations, shown by the form in this column bearing final -y (74 per cent of verbs in this conjugation are intransitive) or -l (85 per cent of verbs in this conjugation are transitive).

Column 2. Grammatical status. There are five lexical word classes—nouns, adjectives (grouped together as nominals), verbs, adverbals (grouped together as verbals), and time words.. For adjectives and time words, just 'adj' or 'time' is recorded in column 3. However, for the other three word classes more detail is provided.

• Nouns. Each noun belongs to one (or, very occasionally, two) choices from the four-term gender system. These can be shown by the appropriate form of the absolutive noun marker bala. The basic concepts are:

- I, bayi—male humans; non-human animates
- II, balan—female humans; fire; drinkable liquids; fighting
- III, balam—edible plant food and honey
- IV, bala is then a residue gender, dealing with everything else (including body and other parts, place names, and flesh food (meat and fish))

There are also a number of general principles for changing the gender of a distinctive subset of a certain semantic class because of physical association, role in legends, or some important property. (Full details are on pp. 19–43 of my 2015 book Edible Gender, Mother-in-Law Style and Other Grammatical Wonders.)

• Verbs. Each verb or adverbial has a transitivity value, shown by:

- int — intransitive verb; functions as the predicate of an intransitive clause, with one core argument (for example, arrive in English),
- tr — transitive verb; functions as the predicate of a transitive clause, with two core arguments (for example, recognise in English)
- ambi — ambitransitive verb; functions as the predicate of an intransitive clause, or as the predicate of an transitive clause. There are two varieties: one where S = A (for example Jean is knitting, Jean is knitting a shawl) and one where S = O (for example, The cup broke, Jean broke the cup).

Only a handful of ambitransitive verbs—all but one being of type S = A—have been recognised for Dyirbal Ev; see pages 402-404 of my 2022 book A New Grammar of Dyirbal. The Ja correspondents for just two of them appear to be ambtransitive in Ja; both are in Mja and are of type S = A. They are jinguwa-l 'reach out with the whole hand (for something)' (code 63A4) and jiyarra-l 'heavy rain falls (on someone or something). (code 7C1).

Column 3. Dialects. Information on Ja was provided for three dialects—N(gajan), M(amu) and J(irrbal), For each entry the dialect(s) for which it is attested are given Column 4. Code. Each entry in the thesaurus has a code. Following its code given here, the place in the thesaurus of each Ja lexeme can be located.

The commencing digit of codes are:

- Capital letter A–N: nouns (plant identifications are at the end of N)

- Capital letter O: adjectives
- Capital letter Y: time words
- Numeral: verbs.
- Ad followed by numeral: adverbals

Column 5. Brief gloss. A succinct indication of meaning, in English. In most cases a fuller statement of meaning will be found in the appropriate thesaurus entry.

Column 6. Some information concerning Ev correspondents. For each Ja verbal, the corresponding nuclear Ev verb is given. For many nominals, a main Ev correspond is stated. For some, we can only say '<several>', 'four', or 'many'.

The alphabetical order followed is:

a, b, d, g, i, j, l, m, n, ñ, ŋ, R, r, rr, u, w, y
